Basic Computer Skills Training

Given the fast paced complexity of the digital age, employees can feel overwhelmed. But now your employees can demonstrate their proficiency in basic computer skills by completing the International Computer Driving License (ICDL). ICDL awards a certificate or “license” that proves one’s competence in operating a personal computer and common office applications. Those employees that need additional training can complete comprehensive self-paced, self-help modules.

ICDL is the world’s leading program providing individuals with basic computer skills training, assessment and certification testing.

- Over 5 million people have participated in ICDL training
- Over 15 million tests have been administered to date

You and your employees can benefit from ICDL certification.

- Employees gain new confidence and increase their opportunity to grow within the company
- You will see a better return on your investment through higher productivity
- Statistics show that ICDL certified candidates are more productive and less apt to rely on costly support services
